

I've tried more "healing potions" than you can imagine. When it comes to "topical treatments" I am, at best, a skeptic. Creams that make big claims have never measured up. When Topricin approached me about a review for their homeopathic Foot Therapy cream, of course I was willing, but with a jaded preconceived notion, I must admit. It is with utter delight, awe and RELIEF that I write this review. In fact, I'm not sure how or why I've been running the streets of NYC for even a day without Topricin Foot Therapy cream. It's absolutely amazing.

The folks at Topricin didn't know, but not only do I have achy, tired feet from wearing heels during the rat-race on the concrete jungle of which I live, I also have an injured tendon smack-dab in the middle of my right arch. It's painful and prevents me from a normal walking experience - even wearing contoured, medical flip-flops doesn't work. The supportive arch hits my tendon and I have to walk on the side of my foot or limp. It's that bad.

The first day I tried Topricin Foot Therapy was one of those race days... 2 pairs of shoes needed to get through the necessary events: supportive shoes for the commute, then the heels for work. I used the recommended dose of Topricin, rubbed it in and put it to the test. IMMEDIATELY I had no pain. NONE. I even wore the arch supported flip-flops for my commute, and felt absolutely no pain on the tendon. I was flabbergasted!! Since that morning, I carry Topricin in my bag. The best news is that I only need it 2-3 times a day, not every hour or something ridiculous. I put it on in the morning, once during the day if needed, then before bed, as also recommended. With this usage, I can stand and walk on my injured foot as if there were no injury! I've never experienced a foot therapy or really anything that has worked so effectively in such a rapid amount of time! I LOVE this stuff!! And, as opposed to other 'treatments' - Topricin claims it works to heal the area of pain, with use and time, so that Topricin is needed less frequently. I believe it.

Topricin dries easily, is not overly greasy and there is no smell. Quite frankly, I think it may be a magic potion and I want to kiss the genie.
